

Mitch Cyrus is living proof that sports fanaticism and appreciation of the arts can co-exist, an opinion shared by Rich Swerbinsky in the creation of the Movies & TV section of TheClevelandFan. Mitch has been onboard at TCF since Day One, contributing as a movie critic, entertainment analyst, sports columnist for football and golf, as well as a humorist with his recaps of “The Sopranos” and “24”.

A native of Shelby, Ohio, Mitch completed his college at High Point University in North Carolina, and decided to stick around due to marrying a pure Southerner as well as having the opportunity to golf year-round. In his real-life profession, Mitch is the director of security and compliance for a software company providing human resource targeted applications.
